

FINAL PRESENTATIONS

Team: AK-47

Problem:

Students struggle to meet the necessary requirements to succeed during and after their school experience; creating a network of “guesses” between higher education and students.

Solutions:

Advising Information Portal

We recognize that many students have confidence in the University Advising Departments. Additionally, Career Services is a priceless resource that every student who reported using, valued. Simultaneously, they are competent and helpful when used to their full potential. In light of this, we suggest moving Advising, while adding Career Services to the same physical location, to a more visible position on the ground floor of the Student Center. The new location would be comfortable, attractive, and easily accessible to all.

Aggie Answers

We propose that we expand peer advising to include an online Question and Answer forum where students can ask and answer one another's questions. Peer advisors from all colleges would take turns moderating the forum, answering questions relating to their college programs. It would be a place where students can feel confident and comfortable to ask literally any question.

University C.O.M.P.A.S.S.

(College, Orientation, Mentoring, Possibilities, and Student Services)

To help students gain the knowledge they need, a required class (COMPASS) will be taught one hour per week by representatives from each college or organization (in their respective time slot) who could explain programs they offer, what degree requirements are, and what can be done with the degree. Organizations like Career Services would educate how to get an internship, where to go to write and revise your resume, and how to apply for graduate school.
